While this game won't change your life, it's a very nice little puzzle with some fun and unique mechanics behind it. The procedurally generated music is top-notch too.. This is a great music puzzle game, with a few twists. The Game itself involves a tetris like grid where you use sound cues to get score bonuses for solving puzzle segments -- and as you progress through the puzzle, the song becomes more complete and complex. Good: - Great Tunes - Easy to learn, had to master Bad: - Some of the effects need polish - Animations Final Verdict. Clearly an Indie game, but an indie game that is a quality attempt. Not an asset flip.. Chromaestro is a simple puzzle game. What's shown in the video is what you get, but it is more challenging than it looks. Each level has its own music, and you receive points by completing each round in a level. Advanced levels are unlocked when you amass a certain number of points, so for example, you may choose to focus on getting to Round 5 in Level 1, or Round 3 in Level 3 to get the points necessary to unlock Level 5. A single game will probably take less than 5 minutes. The proclaimed premise of using music as a game mechanic doesn't seem to take effect here, but I might be missing something. The soundtrack is nice though.
